

INCREASE IN TIMBAVATI CONSERVATION LEVY FOR TOURISM

From 1 January 2018 Tanda Tula and other tourism stakeholders in the Timbavati Game Reserve will increase the Conservation Levy for tourism from R215 (approximately US$16.50) per person per stay to R328 (approximately US$25) per person per day.

At a time when our wilderness areas and wild animals are under greater threat than ever before, Tanda Tula is proud to be a prominent part of this bold initiative to drive conservation revenue through sustainable tourism.

The primary reasons for the increase are:

1. To align the Timbavati Conservation Levy for tourism with what is being charged by the Kruger National Park and reserves in other parts of Africa. Being part of the Greater Kruger National Park, the Timbavati conservation fees were irresponsibly out of line (on average - R72 / approximately US$5.50 per person per day) with what is being charged in other parts of the same eco-system (R328 / approximately US$25 per person per day).
2. With our collective focus on sustainable tourism, and considering the environmental impact; more lodges and tourism beds are not the solution. The Timbavati remains committed to low impact tourism and retaining a wilderness experience. Through limiting the number of beds, the Conservation Levy per guest has to increase to support the overall conservation model.

The Timbavati is an African conservation success story. We are proud to operate our safaris here and look forward to sharing this wilderness area with future guests.

Please note the Timbavati Conservation Levy is charged in ZAR and the approximate US$ has been given to indicate these Park fees versus other areas in Africa.

ABOUT TANDA TULA
